"Since that star danced under which you were born until this present moment, dear Ellen Terry, each of us could have said, as Portia to Bassanio:

Percy Mackaye, the poet and playwright, then read a sonnet, "To Ellen Terry on Her Return to America."

APPEAL MADE TO COURT.

R. O. Clifford Cited to Show Why He Should Not Support Wife.

Justice Gould today cited Robert O. Clifford to show cause next Friday why he should not be compelled to support his wife, Mary A. Clifford, and their child. The rule is based on a petition of the wife filed by Attorney James A. O'Shea, in which she tells of their marriage March 23, 1907, and that they separated August 1 last. Mrs. Clifford says her husband carried out a system of cruel and persistent nagging and by his alleged ungovernable temper, abusive treatment and intemperate habits compelled

She also charges that he threatened her life and being apprehensive of her safety and fearful of the life of the child she had him arrested. July 29 he was bound over to keep the peace and cease from annoying her, she avers.

The defendant is a clerk in the patent office at $500 a month and received.

office at $60 a mouth and receives a pen-sion of $17 monthly, but, his wife says, since August 1 last he has not con-tributed anything to the household ex-penses. She tells the court she has been obliged to obtain employment as a dress-maker at about $1 a day, but is now in poor health and needs assistance from her husband.

Foot Ball and Education. To the Editor of The Star:

I thank you for your splendid editorials on foot ball. I wish every parent in our country could have read them and appre-clated your manly stand. I notice in today's papers two boys killed since you gave your warning. I am a traveling man, therefore not rich, I never had the chance to attend college. Never went to school six months, so I do not know the relations between student and professor. Yet I think I can see how a boy would disobey his parents' wishes and play when his professor openly indorsed the game. I now speak that I know. I worked hard, sacrificing here and there, to educate my son, a bright, promising young man. 'He took a course in mechanical drawing and electrical engineering, was qualified for the best of life's work. But on leaving college played a game too many, was crushed in lower spine, sat a helpless cripple in a reclining chair for four years and passed away. The cost of schooling was not comparable with the cost of suffering and death, to say nothing of the grief, too tender and delicate for the mind to portray. He went in his young manhood, twenty-three years of age, often saying during his helplessness: "I wanted to live and care for my parents in their old age." But he was killed. I do not understand how the management of our highest institutions of knowledge can, for one moment, tolerate a game more barbarous and brutal than the Mexican bull fights, or how the nation, for play's sake, can permit our young men to be slain by the hundreds, by our highest Christian institutions of learning indorsing, yes indorsing, a game that has killed, is killing, and will continue to would disobey his parents' wishes and ing, yes indorsing, a game that has killed, is killing, and will continue to kill. I am speaking of the killed, not the hundreds that are made cripples for life. Should any foreign power come in and kill even one of our students would not the whole nation arouse and annihilate the intruder? Why, then, should the men whom we pay to educate our boys be permitted, as educators, to indorse a game so brutal? It would be far better for our Christian country were these pro-fessors who indorse such a brutal game placed behind bars and our boys go back to common schools, under a law forbid-ding the game ever to be played again. It is certainly no sign of Christian civilization for the game to go on.
